

My proudest accomplishment would have to be the time when I was hired by a start-up (Loca Rides), my last company. Loca rides was on a really early stage with just 2 developers counting myself and a total of 4. There were many challenges from refining the idea, customer requirements to set up a perfect portal for us. As a developer working in an MNC, the rate of deployment was much slower than in Loca. I was exposed to much more than being an iOS developer, from Backend (AWS) to make API's using Python and flask. With the team of just two developers, I had a chance of learning Android too. Which gave me great confidence in me towards learning new and advanced technologies in a short period of time. And in the span of 5-6 weeks, we were up and ready for the market.
